DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-5, drawn to polypeptides of SEQ ID NO: 2, classified in class 530, subclass 300 and 350.
- II. Claims 6-15, drawn to nucleic acids, vectors, host cells, recombinant expression vectors, method for producing polypeptides, classified in class 435, subclass 69.1.
- III. Claims 16, 17-19 and 21, drawn to antibodies and method of making antibodies, classified in class 530, subclass 387.1, 387.9, 388.1 and 388.15.
- IV. Claim 20, drawn to an anti-idiotypic antibody, classified in class 530, subclass 387.2.

The nucleic acids of invention II are related to the polypeptides of invention I by virtue of encoding same. The DNA molecule has utility for the recombinant production of the protein in a host cell, as recited in the claims of invention II. Although the DNA molecule and protein are related since the DNA encodes the specifically claimed protein, they are distinct inventions because the protein product can be made by another and materially different process, such as by synthetic peptide synthesis or purification from the natural source. Further, the DNA may be used for processes other than the production of the protein, such as nucleic acid hybridization assay.

The polypeptides of invention I are related to the antibodies of invention III by virtue of being the cognate antigen, necessary for the production of antibodies. Although the protein and antibody are related due to the necessary steric complementarity of the two, they are distinct inventions because the protein can be used in another and materially different process from the use for the production of the antibody, such as in a pharmaceutical composition in its own right, or to assay or purify the natural ligand of the protein (if the protein is itself a receptor), or in assays for the identification of agonists or antagonists of the receptor protein.

Invention IV is unrelated to inventions I and II. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, the polypeptides of invention I and the nucleic acids of invention II are not necessary for antibody production and are wholly different compounds having different compositions and functions. Therefore, these inventions are distinct.

The nucleic acid of invention II and the antibodies of invention III are related by virtue of the protein that is encoded by the nucleic acid and necessary for the production of the antibody. However, the nucleic acid itself is not necessary for antibody production and both are wholly different compounds having different compositions and functions. Therefore, these inventions are distinct.

Inventions III and IV are distinct and/or independent because an antibody that binds to the protein of invention I is not the same antibody that binds to the antibody that binds the protein of invention I.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
